SELLING AND NEGOTIATION · 7 MIN READ

Rejections and negotiation

An objection is not a rejection. It is the customer telling you what still stands between them and the bike. Handle it well and you are closer to the sale than before.

The four-step answer

- Acknowledge: "That is fair." Never "No, but".
- Ask: find the real concern. "Is it the total, or is it more than you planned for this type of bike?"
- Answer: respond to that concern only.
- Confirm: "Does that sort it out?" Then move to the next step.

Common objections

THEY SAY	WHAT IT OFTEN MEANS	WHAT TO DO
"It is too expensive."	Over budget, or the value is not clear yet	Ask which. If over budget, show the model below. If value, explain what the price includes.
"I will think about it."	Something is unanswered	"Of course. What would you like to be sure about?" Then agree a follow-up day.
"It is cheaper online."	Comparing the box price only	Ask to see the listing. Check it is the same model, year and size. Explain assembly, fit, free services and local warranty support.
"I need to ask at home."	Another person decides	Offer to send details on WhatsApp for them, and invite both to the store.
"Another shop will give more discount."	Testing your price	Do not match blindly. Ask what exactly is included there, then use what you are allowed to offer.

Find out if it is the only thing

Before you move on price, ask: "If we can sort out the price, are you ready to go ahead today?" If the answer is no, price is not the real objection, and a discount will not close the sale.

Negotiating the D Byk way

- Never open with a discount. Sell the bike first. A discount offered before it is asked for is money given away.
- Know your limit before you start. Discounts follow the Discount Authority Matrix: bikes by brand on MRP, accessories by invoice slab. Know the rupee floor for the bike in front of you, not only the percentage.
- Payment mode matters. The extra discount is only for UPI, cash or bank transfer. It does not apply to card payments.

- Slashed prices. If a bike already has a D Byk slashed price, any discount is worked on the slashed price, not on MRP.
- Mixed bills. On a bill with a bike and accessories, each follows its own rule.
- Trade, do not give. If you move, ask for something back: "If I do this, can we bill it today?"

When you must escalate

- Bikes tagged brand-offer: the brand has already cut the price.
- Framesets: these are custom builds.
- Anything below your floor.

These go to Akshay. Tell the customer you will confirm and come back with an answer, and give a time. Upgrade Bargains items are final price, with no further discount at all.

When the answer is no

- It is not personal. Stay warm. Customers return to the shop that treated them well when they said no.
- Ask one last question: "What would have made this a yes?" The answer is your real lost reason.
- Record the true reason in the CRM. If they are still deciding, keep the inquiry open with a follow-up date.

Remember these

- Acknowledge, ask, answer, confirm.
- Check whether price is the only thing before you discount.
- Never open with a discount, know your rupee floor, and trade instead of giving.
- Brand-offer bikes, framesets and anything below floor go to Akshay. Upgrade Bargains are final.
